

Arts and Science College Adds Philosophy Major

Dr. Leland Miles, dean of the College of Arts and Science, has announced the addition of a major in philosophy, effective next fall.

Dean Miles hailed the addition of a philosophy major as "a major step in the development of the College of Arts and Science".

The courses required for the new major include: 24 hours from Philosophy 201, 202, 301, 202, 204, and 306, and Philosophy 323, 324, which is identical with Sociology 323,4; Political Science 203; Sociology 201, 202; Mathematics, 105, 106; Psychology 103, 104; and 2 hours in art, music, and literature. Psychology 303, 315 and 316 are listed as recommended courses.

A description of the philosophy major states: "The philosophy major draws on the deepest sources of experience in the Humanities and Sciences in order to understand the nature and destiny of man and the universe he inhabits. Students preparing for the ministry or other forms of religious service; those who, in combination with the requisite preparation in mathematics, wish to pursue a career in structuring of modern electronic data processing; or those seeking the well rounded liberal arts background for more specialized forms of business and professional training programs, including teaching, should consider the preparation provided by the philosophy major."

Dean Miles said the University hopes to bring to campus an outstanding and nationally known scholar to head the Philosophy department. Dr. Justus van der Kroef, associate professor of sociology and political science, is now the co-ordinating chairman of the Philosophy department. Dr. van der Kroef will assume the position of chairman of the Political Science Department in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Bernhard, trustees of the University, last year established the Bernhard Professorship of Philosophy to help defray the salary of a department chairman.

University To Publish 'Series' On British History and Culture

The University has just signed a contract to publish a Monograph Series jointly with the Conference on British Studies, a group of distinguished scholars whose fields touch on British culture. The title will be "Studies in British History and Culture".

The Series plans to publish one book per year of around 80 to 150 pages in length. Each book will bear the imprint "Published by the Conference on British Studies at the University of Bridgeport". On the reverse side of the title page will be the statement "Studies in British History and Culture is sustained by an annual subsidy from the University of Bridgeport."

The annual book will be selected from national competition and will be in the area of history, broadly interpreted to include political, socio-economic, intellectual, aesthetic, scientific and other appropriate areas. Preference will be given to books which combine two or more of the traditional disciplines.

The annual Monograph will be selected by a board of two senior editors, one representing the Conference on British Studies and the other representing the University. There will also be three associate editors representing English History, English Literature, and political science respectively. There will also be a distinguished Advisory panel. Members of the Advisory panel and the associate editors will come from outstanding universities from all areas of the country.

Professor Stephen Graubard, Editor of Daedalus and a Harvard history professor, will be the senior editor representing the Conference on British Studies. He is an internationally known scholar and Daedalus is now one of the leading Journals in the English-speaking world. Daedalus is published by the American Academy of Arts and Science.

Dr. Leland Miles, dean of the College of Arts and Science, will temporarily serve as the senior editor representing the University.

Once the manuscript has been selected by the senior and the associate editors, the actual editing of the selected Monograph will be performed by an assistant professor of history to be appointed at the University. This assistant professor will hopefully be an outstanding young history professor with editorial background.

Dean Miles said that the Monograph Series will serve a "real need in American Scholarship." "Although there are many learned Journals, there are not many outlets for short learned books. This Monograph Series will bring the University into the national scholarly world and will make it known among historians internationally. Beginning next September, the University, through this Monograph Series, will be in contact with some of the leading historians in the country," said Dean Miles.

24 Named to 'Who's Who'

Twenty-four students have been named as representatives from the University to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" for 1964-65.

"Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" is a publication contributed to by colleges and universities throughout the country as a means of giving recognition to outstanding members of their student body.

A total of 45 students applied. The University was allowed to choose 35 students. A minimum Q.P.R. of 2.5 was needed to qualify and only juniors and seniors could apply.

Those selected include: Brian Anderson, Diane Barabas, Edmund Bennett, William Eagleson, Carol Eannello, Brian Faranda, Linda Goldberg, Ronald Jordon, Evelyn Kempler, Ann Kennedy, Georgianna Kowardovich, Stephen Kempler, Ann Kennedy, Georgianna Kowardovich, Stephen Kurlansky, Linda Lerner, Florence Marcus, William Marschalk, Paul McNamara, Carol Paradick, Janet Schneider, Pamela Sellars, Suanne Sharp, Leonard Soyka, Gerald Webber, Kenneth Weise, and Robert Zuccaro.

Linda Lerner, vice president of the Student Council, and Arthur Harris were co-chairmen of the University's "Who's Who" Committee and responsible for selecting the students.

Miss Lerner explained that the "Who's Who" list is usually released in November, but was not released until now because a letter announcing the deadline was received by the committee only one week before the deadline. Also, Miss Lerner said that the committee had to establish a new system to determine who would be selected because last year's system was not documented and filed.

Miss Lerner said a point system, similar to the system used in the past was set up by which every office and organizational position on campus was assigned a point value. The students who met the required minimum Q.P.R. of 2.5 were then given points in relation to their offices. The point value for various offices was known only by the committee and the Office of Student Personnel which approved the applicants.

Miss Lerner said that the point system is fairly well standardized throughout the country in schools having representatives to "Who's Who." She said some schools give more credit to community activities because they are commuting schools.

Miss Lerner said she believes the point system is a workable and fair one and that the committee will file its report to eliminate any future problems.

Nehru's Daughter On Campus Today

Mrs. Indira Nehru Gandhi, minister of information and broadcasting for India and a daughter of the late Prime Minister Nehru, will speak at a 2 p.m. convocation program this afternoon in the Social room of the Student Center.

Mrs. Gandhi will also make a second address at 8 p.m. in the Social room on "India Looks to the Future." The 2 p.m. program will include a question and answer period.

Her visit to the campus was arranged by William Benton, former U. S. Senator and a member of the University's Board of Trustees.

In 1947 Mrs. Gandhi worked with Mahatma Gandhi in the riot affected areas of Delhi. She became a member of the All-India

Congress Committee in 1955 and subsequently became president of the Women's Department of the A.I.C.C. and a member of its Election Committee and the Central Party Parliament.

As chairman of the Citizen's Central Council, formed after the Chinese invasion of India in October, 1962, Mrs. Gandhi was one of those who led the nation's defense effort.

She is particularly interested in the development and welfare of India's children and is associated with numerous children's organizations.

Mrs. Gandhi is a member of the Executive Board of UNESCO and a recipient of the 1963 United States Mother's Award. In 1960 she was honored with the Yale University Howland Memorial Prize.

UB in Proposed Football Conference

The University is one of six colleges from the Connecticut-New Jersey area that will meet at the end of this month to discuss plans for a new football conference.

Representatives of the schools, including Bridgeport Athletic Director Herbert E. Glines, met at the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) convention in New York early last month to discuss the tentative conference and then reported to their schools.

The proposed conference would include Bridgeport, Southern Connecticut, Central Connecticut, Montclair State, Trenton State and Glassboro State. Bridgeport is the only non-state school listed in the circuit.

Indications are that all six colleges had received administrative approval to join the conference and play will begin in September.

Each school would play at least four conference schools next season and a round-robin would begin in 1966.

Bridgeport has added Trenton State and Montclair State to its 1965 schedule, which already includes traditional opponents Southern Connecticut and Central Connecticut.

The Knights faced no scheduling problem as the two new foes merely increased their schedule from an unusual low of seven games in 1964 to a normal nine-game slate.

Long-time rivals Northeastern, American International and Hofstra, along with Ithaca and Cortland State also appear on UB's 1965 schedule.

Coach Bob DiSpirito's team has scrimmaged Montclair State and Trenton State in recent years.

The representative from Dieges and Clust will be on campus on Tuesday, Feb. 16, from noon until 6 p.m. in room 205 of the Student Center. Members of the Class of 1966 can at that time order class rings. A $10 deposit is required with all orders.

Sign on Line for 299

The Scribe, in co-operation with the journalism department, will again conduct a one-semester hour credit Journalism Workshop, Journalism 299, during the spring semester. It will require a one hour class session weekly and assigned tasks.

Final enrollment is determined after individual interviews by the instructor with course registrants on the first day of class.

The course is open to any student who has been a member of a high school newspaper staff, regular Scribe staffers and journalism majors. Some experience in newspaper, editorial, advertising, circulation or clerical functions is necessary. Permission to enroll will also be granted to any student with special talents in photography and creative writing.

The 'File'

The College of Business Administration recently voted down a proposal from the Faculty Senate's Student Life Committee which would establish a so-called "suspicious file."

The file would contain the names of students turned in by instructors who were suspected of cheating, but for whom there is no actual proof. After a student's name was turned in by an instructor, he would then be counseled, most likely by the Office of Student Personnel, about his questionable actions during the taking of an examination.

Professor James Fenner, chairman of the Student Life Committee, says that the file would primarily be used to consult and help a student before any trouble arises and the student is actually found to be cheating.

Our only question is: Why can't the instructor himself speak to the student rather than have the responsibility placed with the administration through such a file? Isn't the instructor responsible for a student while he is in the classroom?

We sincerely hope that the other colleges will record their opposition to this file and that when the Faculty Senate gets the proposal, it also will vote no. The very thought of such a system—a file of accused persons for whom there is no actual proof—is against every basic concept that a free and democratic society supposedly stands for.

In its attempt to help the student, as its supporters claim it would, the file would only be doing what the super-patriotic organizations which have sprung up throughout this nation do: encroach upon the privacy and personal freedoms of the individual in the guise, whether it be real or false, of helping.

The 'Bowl'

"We were just up for it."

These were the words that a member of the Lawrence University College Bowl Team used to describe his school's big victory over a University of Bridgeport team on the nationally televised General Electric College Bowl. The University's team had a rough going on the program, suffering a 255 to 65 defeat.

We had the opportunity to watch the practice sessions which took place before the actual show; we only wish the television audience and this campus could have seen the four students from this University, for they would have obtained the same strong feeling of pride in the University's team and the hopeful enthusiasm in knowing we did indeed have the ability to knock off Lawrence.

In the last two practice sessions the University's team came close to beating the Lawrence men. In one game, the UB team was some 40 points ahead before Lawrence caught up and tied 75 to 75 at half-time in another of the sessions.

We well remember the serious faces of the Lawrence team and their coach while riding on the elevator immediately following the last practice session. Their serious mood had replaced an extremely confident one which they had reflected all day. They knew the University's team had the potential to stop them.

And then, of course, came the actual program and the Lawrence team was able to jump out ahead by a big margin and stay there.

To the team members, Miss Helen Wallace, Messieurs Arthur Bernstein, Robert Sterling, and Peter Miletta, we say congratulations for their fine attempt, for the many, many hours of work they put in, and for the pride they managed to instill in us during those practice sessions; it is only too bad that the entire campus could not have been sitting in on them also.

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the UB College Bowl Team, I would like to express my deep appreciation for the assistance received from many members of our University community. My thanks goes in particular to the many members of the Faculty who kindly provided us with training questions, to the Office of Student Personnel, and especially Mr. Richard Doolittle, who was ever available with helpful advice, to the Office of Public Relations for its extensive publicity coverage of the team's work, to the Maintenance Department for its construction of the "buzzer" and lighting system used in our training sessions, to the Dana Scholars for providing us with moderators and "sparring" partners, and, last but not least, to the many students who provided us with training questions, suggestions and encouragement.

A special word of appreciation is extended to Mr. Peter Zawacki who, as public relations chairman of the team, worked long and hard to call the attention of the campus community to the importance of the Bowl and the needs and operations of the team.

To all of these, again, our sincere thanks.

J. M. van der Kroef
Adviser,
UB College Bowl
Team

TO THE EDITOR:

The most distinguishing mark of a winning school is the magnanimity with which it accepts its defeats. The University of Bridgeport College Bowl Team energetically prepared and hopefully vied. In all fairness and respect, we should value the team that proved its victory through a spirit of aspiration.

SANDY M. PADRICK

TO THE EDITOR:

An Open Letter to the UB Faculty
Dear Colleagues:

I respectfully call your attention to the article, "Senate To Take Up 'Suspicious File' Proposal" on page two of The Scribe, January 14, 1965. It seems that some thought is being given to a file of names of suspected cheaters against whom there is "no actual proof." This file would be turned over to the Office of Student Personnel so that the students involved might be "counseled."

This proposal incites me to express a diametrical opinion based on the following:

1. It appears to me that it is a basic responsibility of the instructor and/or proctor(s), upon suspicion of cheating, to speak to the group in general terms referring to the specific behavior in question or, without attempting to embarrass, confront the student. If the behavior continues, further steps are necessary.

2. A committee of the American Association of University Professors has published as tentative a "Statement on Faculty Responsibility for the Academic Freedom of Students," AAUP Bulletin, Autumn, 1964, 254-7. The Preamble begins, "Freedom to teach and freedom to learn are indivisible. Freedom to learn depends upon appropriate conditions and opportunities in the classroom, as well as opportunities to exercise the rights of citizenship on and off the campus."

I fail to see that a "suspicious file" would enhance the opportunities or conditions in the classroom.

3. Philip E. Jacob, Changing Values in College, says on page 8 of this study that faculty members who are identified as causing individuals to re-orient their philosophy "... are likely to be persons whose own value commitments are firm and openly expressed, and who are out-going and warm in their personal relations with students." I find that I am unable to classify a "suspicious file" as "warm."

I compliment the CBA Faculty on its quick response to the proposal. They voted in opposition 12-4. I urge all the colleges to record the views of the faculties and make these views known to the Student Life Committee, Mr. James Fenner, Chairman.

Yours for better schools,
SIDNEY CLARK
College of Education

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading the article in the January 14 edition of The Scribe concerning the controversy over the financing of publications by the Student Council, I was appalled at the arguments which were used to render their decision. First of all, it is necessary to elucidate the purpose and intent of the Sociology Colloquium's publication which has been distorted beyond recognition. The seminar class in sociology, under the auspices and direction of the sociology department, through extensive interviewing and research, each year endeavors to gather material pertinent to a selected ethnic group in the community for a future publication.

Mr. Harris, senior class representative, purports that as a freshman he contributed to the seminar publication. It is of particular interest to note that I have examined the previous publications in the last four years and cannot find his name listed anywhere as a collaborator. It is stigmatizing to Student Council when one of its members fabricates a story in order to proselytize the student government. Also, Mr. Harris emphatically states that this publication is not a scholarly work. Well, I would like to know by what criteria a scholarly work is assessed and what your qualifications are, Mr. Harris, to evaluate one?

As for Mr. Doolittle's insinuation that the organization could procure its own finances, how can a virtually non-solvent organization appropriate the necessary funds? If this is the recommendation of the esteemed advisor to Student Council, then why doesn't Student Council have a car wash or paper drive in order to balance the budget? In reference to Mr. Doolittle's rhetorical statement, "Should the student government be in the publishing business"; he had better consult the files because The Scribe is financed by Council.

ROBERT ZUCCARO
President of the Sociology
Colloquium

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to correct a slight misquote in interpretation in the article in The Scribe of January 14 regarding my statement on the matter of the Sociology Colloquium pamphlet. I did not take part in the preparation of said pamphlet as intimated in the article, but rather I did help a member of that group collect and compile the information that did go into that year's pamphlet. The rest of the quote has not been misquoted and stands as quoted in the previous edition of The Scribe.

ARTHUR HARRIS
Senior Class Representative,
Student Council

EDITOR'S NOTE:

There is no such thing as an interpretative quote. A quote is what a person says. Mr. Harris says that he was misquoted with the words "I worked on" in the last issue of The Scribe. If he was misquoted, we apologize for the error, but his above explanation of the extent of his connection with the pamphlet seems to intimate the same interpretation as the words "worked on," to us.

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH

Today I begin my eleventh year of writing this column in your campus newspaper.

I wasn't sure I'd be coming back this year. After a decade of doing this column, I had retreated to my country seat, tired but happy, to enjoy a nice long rest. But last night as I sat on my verandah, peaceful and serene, humming the largo from A Long Day's Night and warming my dog, a stranger suddenly appeared before me.

He was a tall, clean-limbed man, crinkly-eyed and crooked-grinned, stalwart and virile. "How do you do," he said. "My name is Stalwart Virile and I am with the Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blade people."

"Enchanted," I said. "Take off your homburg and sit down." I clapped my hands sharply. "Norman!" I called. "Another chair for Mr. Virile!"

"Another chair for Mr. Virile!"

Obediently my dog trotted away and returned directly with a fanback chair of Malayan rattan. He is the smartest dog in our block.

"I suppose you're wondering why I am here," said Mr. Virile, seating himself.

"Well, sir," I replied, my old eyes twinkling roguishly, "I'll wager you didn't come to read my meter."

You can imagine how we howled at that one!

"That's a doozy!" cried Mr. Virile, finally catching his breath. "I must remember to tell it to Alice when I get home."

"Your wife?" I said.

"My father," he said.

"Oh," I said.

"But enough of wit and humor," he said. "Let us get down to business. How would you like to write a campus column for Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?"

"For money?" I said.

"Yes," he said.

"My hand, sir," I said and clasped his. Warmly he returned the pressure, and soft smiles played upon our lips, and our eyes were moist with the hint of tears, and we were silent, not trusting ourselves to speak.

"What will you write about in your campus column?" asked Mr. Virile when he was able to talk again.

"I will take up the burning issues that vex the American undergraduate!" I cried, bounding to my feet. "I will explore, without fear or favor, such explosive questions as 'Are roommates sanitary?' and 'Should proctors be given a saliva test?' and 'Should capital punishment for pledges be abolished?' and 'Can a student of 19 find happiness with an economics professor of 80?'"

"And will you also say a pleasant word from time to time about Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades?" asked Mr. Virile.

"Sir," I said simply, "what other kind of word except pleasant could I possibly say about Personna Blades, which give me more luxury shaves than Beep-Beep or any other blade I might name?"

"Another of my products is Burma Shave," said Mr. Virile. "Can you find it in your heart to mention Burma Shave occasionally?"

"But of course!" I declared. "For is not Burma Shave the whisker-wiltingest lather in the land?"

"Yes," he admitted.

And then he shook my hand again and smiled bravely and was gone—a tall silhouette moving erectly into the setting sun. "Farewell, good tonsorialist!" I cried after him. "Aloha!"

And turned with a will to my typewriter.

CAGERS SLUMP TO 2-11 RECORD

The University basketball team, currently caught in a dismal eight-game losing streak, may have a good chance this season to break the loss string, when they meet Southern Conn. State College tomorrow night in an away game.

The Purple Knights whose record now stands at a black 2-11 mark, will be trying to bounce back onto the winning trail after falling to the Coast Guard Academy, 98-83, last week.

It was a consistent game for the Knights, who played heads up ball for the first two periods, then fell apart like an aspirin in a glass of water. Leading by a score of 48-44 when the first half gun sounded, UB looked like it would finally live up to its much shouted, but little shown, potential.

At the outset of the first half it was evident that the sailors were not going to stand for any bad fortune. They effectively checked the UB attack and advanced their own so when time ran out they were well in command.

Southern Connecticut, who at last check were also scuffling along with a 2-10 record, will be the last chance for UB to change their luck. Following the Owls will come a parade of Tri-State teams that should give Gus Seaman some very anxious moments.

In order of appearance they are: Rider, Wagner, Fairleigh Dickenson, Long Island, Iona, Central Conn., Hofstra, and Fairfield U.

Rider, who had a 4-7 record before the vacation, are not as bad as their record may paint them. They played Fairfield U. down to the wire before giving out and should supply a tough game.

The rest of the schedule should speak for itself. It will take nearly a miracle for the Knights (in their present state) to beat any of them.

"The job of the college newspaper is to raise hell."
